PERCENTAGE SHARE OF INDIAN STUDENTS GOING ABROAD COUNTRY-WISE

OPPORTUNITIES' FOR INDIANS

We are at a peculiar time in history where India's population which was supposed to doom us has become its greatest strength. We are at present awarding close to 5 Lakhs engineering Degrees every year. If we look at the world economy and human capital market, most of the developed economies are suffering from same problems i.e. a) Lack of Qualified Manpower b) Ageing population.

Europe and USA had a golden spell after 2nd world war [1950 onwards] and there was an unprecedented growth in science, technology, communications and IT which hasn't been witnessed in history of mankind. This growth was accompanied by huge investment in Universities and training of engineers. This period also witnessed a baby boom in these areas since first time in many centuries there was comparative peace for a long period of time. United States and most of the European states scaled new peaks of industrialization and the population reaped in the benefits.

However, over a period of time the focus shifted and no of students opting for technology stream has gone down. This accompanied with overall decline in students taking admissions into university had led to shortage of trained manpower. So, although there is a shortage of manpower companies can't recruit as there aren't enough trained candidates. This has led to a unique situation wherein employers want to recruit but still there is unemployment among youth as they are not qualified enough. The situation is poised to become even more critical as a vast no of those working at these positions are scheduled to retire in coming 4-5 years. This is the one of the main reasons percentage of foreign workers are growing all over USA and Europe Ex. NASA has close 30% foreigners now.

India, with its huge trained manpower who can speak English has a unique opportunity to utilize this opportunity. Foreign students get 2-3 years to get accustomed to the local culture and therefore have a better chance of being employed compared to someone applying from India.

It is due to short term vision of Indian leaders where they focused only on quantity rather than focusing on quality as well that we have landed in this position today. Unfortunately, we encounter real time examples of this problem. The main problem areas are:

- Lack of Communication Skills: Since the focus is primarily on scoring marks many of the students don't pay any attention to their communication skills. This has resulted in many batches of engineering students who are unfit for any job role. There is an urgent need to incorporate communications as an essential part of all undergraduate programs.
- Special Emphasis of Weak Students: Many of the Engineering students graduating lack even the basic concepts and are totally inadequate. There is an urgent need to improve student faculty ratio and place special emphasis on weak students.
- Aptitude Test before Admissions: There is no denial to the fact that every student has right to technical education. Unfortunately due to mushrooming of colleges all over country there isn't any basic test conducted to ascertain whether student has the aptitude for it. Due to this reason we are losing many students who could have been successful in their areas of interest. It's imperative that we bring in some form of aptitude test to judge the aptitudes of students.

CONCLUSION India has a great opportunity to be a leader in the world in science and technology provided we work on areas of neglect and put our house in order.

DRAWBACK

The national employability report compiled by Aspiring Minds revealed that only 17.45 percent of technical graduates in the country are ready to be employed. What this also means is that the rest, that is, 82.55 per cent, engineering graduates are unemployable. [Source Rediff.com].

I took a decision for Masters after working 2 years at nfosys. Since I was looking at top universities, I was sceptical about the credentials and abilities of consultants to handle my profile. My worst fears came true and I was totally disappointed. One of my colleagues referred HOC and from the very first counselling session, it gave the confidence that they knew about the stuff they were talking about. They helped me shortlist universities based on my exact parameters and assisted me at every stage i.e. SOP and Essays, applying to univ's etc. I would strongly recommend anyone looking for good schools to join HOC, they would take care of the rest. Cheers.....

Ms Chemical Engineering,

HOC played a very important role in my admission process. All I did was to give them the documents that are necessary and they did the rest of the work for me. The thing I like most about HOC is that its counselors are very frank and right on the target. They will let you know whether your choice is ambitious or moderate, if moderate what your chances are to get in straight away, they are not the ones who would beat around the bush. Also, they are considerate towards student's financial status and inquires them about the price range they can afford. I suggested it to all of my friends I guess that sums it up. Thank you HOC
